Hamilton, the home of Col. White, for a military funeral to-day at 5 P. M. The body will be shipped on Thursday to Arlington, Va., for interment.

Col. White was one of the most active officers in the coast artillery service and his knowledge of the minute details of the science of coast defence gathered during his thirty-eight years of service made him one of the most important of-ficers in this branch of the army. The confidence which the Government reposed in Col. White's ability is shown reposed in Coi. Whate's ability is shown by the fact that when a vacancy occurred he commanded for nearly a year the north Altantic division of the United States coast defences, which embraces all forts from Maine to Delaware. This is the command of a Brigadier-General.

During his military career, which started on his graduation from West Point in 1877, when he was 23 years old, Col. White had served in nearly country, commanding as it does the en-
